How to Use This Study Tool: An Example

This example shows how to use the arrows to think about interconnections: The first use shows an ▶ under “Navigation Acts of the 1600s...” and then an ▲ under both the “Interests – North” and “Interests – South” because both are changed by this policy.

<sup>1</sup> Mercantile regulation is also called mercantilism. Under mercantilism, taxes were not intended to provide money to the government, but to regulate trade.

<sup>2</sup> This is new form of government that evolves because the new king from Germany neither spoke English nor was accustomed to English politics. The leader of the political party that won in Parliamentary elections became the leader of the executive branch. The person’s title was (and still is) prime minister. He (or she in this century) held office until his party lost the elections, and then the leader of the winning political party became the new prime minister. That is why there are so many instances in the chronology of the words “New prime minister.”

<sup>3</sup> A Pitt calls Grenville’s view of virtual representation as “the most contemptable idea that ever entered into the head of a man” (Essentials, page 126).

<sup>4</sup> For colony-wide dealing with the Indians, proposed by Benjamin Franklin but not approved by any colony.

<sup>5</sup> This uses the word boycott for the non-importation measures taken by the colonists; however, the word boycott was not coined until the 1880s. Webster’s Encyclopedic Unabridged Dictionary states: “[after Charles C. Boycott., English estate manager in Ireland, against whom nonviolent coercive tactics were used in 1880.]”

<sup>6</sup> The plan called for the revenue to fund governors—thus making them no longer dependent on colonial legislatures.

- Boston Port Act – Closed port until Boston pays
- Quartering Act – Required local payment for quarters (places to stay, food, candles) for British soldiers
- Massachusetts Government Act –Government would not be elected by the local people, but appointed by the English government
- Town meetings (traditional local government in New England) required the governor’s consent.

<sup>9</sup> Lord North – end taxes if colony pays salary of own governor and pays for own defense

<sup>10</sup> An olive branch is a symbol of trying to make peace. - The George III’s response, however, was that the colonists were “open and avowed enemies.”
